THE DAYS OF OLD

When Warriors Bold went Forth in Armed Array

Lived Over in Song, and Speech, and Story,

By the Veterans of Three Sister States

At the Grand Reunion of the Boys in Blue Yesterday.

A "Forced March" and a Soldiers' Old-Time Dinner,

Followed by Ringing Oratory and Patriotic Songs.

The Streets Crowded with Citizens to Greet the Boys

Who Defended the Union when it Had Need of them.

Five Thousand People Fed and Twice as Many

Partake of a Feast of Reason and a Flow of Soul.

The big Tri-State Reunion of 1886 is a thing of the past, but it will live in the memory of those who participated as long as the deeds it commemorated and recalled are sung in song or told in story. It was an event the equal of which, in its way, was never before witnessed in Wheeling.

In general and profuse decorations nothing ever approached it except the celebration of the Centennial, and that did not equal it. The crowd has seldom been surpassed in Wheeling, and this crowd was unfavorable affected by threats of rain. It is safe to say that under circumstances entirely favorable the crowd in town would have been twice as large.

As it was, everything passed off smoothly, everybody was pleased, and the success of the Tri-State Reunion of 1886 will do much to contribute to the success of the reunion of the Society of the Army of West Virginia in 1887.

THE PARADE AND REVIEW.

The Surprising Display on the Streets Yesterday Afternoon.

The grand parade and review of the veterans took place yesterday morning arranged for on the programme. Like everything else about the reunion it was a big success, and made a very decided impression on the thousands that lined the streets along the line of march. While the number in line was not as large as many expected to see, the procession was a most notable and interesting one.

The heavy rain of the previous night had made the streets, except those paved with the brick blocks, very muddy and slippery, and difficult to march over. This fact and the clouds, which threatened rain all the morning, served to keep a large number out of the ranks. Indeed, it was a common remark that the number of old soldiers in the crowds that filled the sidewalks and watched the column swing by, almost equaled the number marching in the streets.

UNIFORMS IN THE DAY.

At daybreak, a National salute of thirteen rounds was fired on the State Fair grounds from the twelve-pound cannon brought down from East Liverpool and handled by a squad under command of Captain Joshua C. Johnson. At the same time the clear, ringing notes of the reveille were sounded by Bugler Miller from the top of Wheeling hill. The thundering echoes of the salute had not yet ceased reverberating among the Ohio and West Virginia hills, and the bugle call was sounding when the city was wide awake and the streets alive with the bustle of preparation. Decorations disturbed by the wind and rain of the night before were re-arranged in the early morning and motion put out. The day broke bright and clear, but soon after the sky was overcast with clouds that betokened rain. Only a few drops fell, however, and the clouds saved the day from being a sunnier one.

The sun shined, the day was warm, but not oppressively so.

Colonel W. B. Curtis, who had been chosen the Chief Marshal of the Day, had issued his order commanding the troops to be in position to move promptly at 9 o'clock. The order to move was passed at 9 o'clock, the delay was occasioned by the lateness of trains bearing troops that were to take part in the parade. As it was several companies did not get into the city in time to start with the column and were obliged to drop in at various points along the route.

THE CROWD IN TOWN.

With the troops from out of the city came their families and other excursionists, filled with patriotic desires to make the Tri-State Reunion as much of a success as possible. Everyone seemed to take a special interest in the occasion, and it was largely this that made the reunion such an eminent success. The excursionists mingled with the residents, who were out in force and crowded the sidewalks so that locomotion was a rather formidable task among the muddy streets were so crowded.

From 8 to 9 o'clock the scenes on Market street from Twelfth to the postoffice and in the Public Square were full of interest and life. This was especially the case about the general headquarters, just below the McLure House. There the street was packed full; there was a continual reunion in progress for over two hours, and as each delegation from out of the city arrived the enthusiasm increased and the cheering and singing and the drumming and the old-time step, and the five shrill accompaniment was heard above all the noise. Bands played patriotic airs, comrades who had not seen each other since the war, rushed into each other's arms and wept for joy as they gazed in each other's eyes, and clasped hands once again.

PREPARING FOR THE PARADE.

Generals and colonels and majors on horseback dashed about with martial bearing—good riders mostly, who had seen service too long to sit uneasily in the saddle on such a playday as this. Horses, too, were full of the spirit of the occasion; they were sleek fellows, fattened at the expense of the war, and they were ready for all the world war horses—many of the saddle stocks were worn and faded, the harness of the gilt stars somewhat dimmed, but all in condition for efficient service.

About 9 o'clock the various G. A. R. posts, companies and regimental organizations began falling into line and taking up their line of march towards the rendezvous, the Public Square. While this was going on an opportunity was afforded to inspect the crowds on the streets.

There were business men, professional men, and laboring men; city, town and country people; soldiers and civilians; young and old, of both sexes; children by the thousands; the best of order prevailed, and the good humor that was everywhere apparent was marked.

THE COLUMN MOVES.

Shortly after ten o'clock the bugle sounded the advance and the column took up the line of march over the route as planned yesterday's issue. As the companies were given the old soldiers straightened up with the old, easy swing, and they moved along, happy that they were once more able to join their comrades and renew the warm friendships found during the rebellion. At the head of the column rode Chief of Police Smith and fourteen men of the force, two or three of them veterans, all mounted. The police were in full dress and looked and rode well. Colonel Curtis and his staff were next in line; they were all men who had seen service in the saddle, and they looked handsome and brave as their steeds pranced along. The awkward squad, composed of members of the Tri-State Reunion committees were next in line.

Following were the G. A. R. Posts, companies and regimental organizations, and old soldiers from almost every State in the Union that contributed soldiers to the Union army; there were bands and drum corps that blew and rattled out the music in a lively manner. The light cavalry, mounted on the best of horses, and the Union cavalry band, of the famous Opera House band of this city. Junior Vice commander B. N. Linsay of the Department of Ohio, G. A. R. from Steubenville, was in command of about 300 men from the various posts of Jefferson county. Capt. D. S. Ball of Canton, Ohio, commanded a square of about 40 men representing twenty-two Ohio regiments.

SOME OF THE TROOPS.

The Bridgeport drum corps was at the head of a squad of 25 men from Co. F, 50th Ohio, commanded by W. T. Stradman. Brannon Post, No. 221, of Bridgeport, Ohio, was next in line. The corps turned out sixty strong. East Liverpool was well represented. It sent a drum corps of ten pieces, and General Lyon Post, No. 44, with its handsome little post command. There were about fifty men in all, including the corps of the Bridgeport, Ohio, under command of Fred G. Coxall and J. N. Ruse. Pierpont Post, of Weilsburg, was in line, handsomely uniformed, and very enthusiastic. This post also had its post cannon and pulled it through the ranks. These companies made up of soldiers from the Gettysburg field, are handsomely plated and are complete in every particular. They were frequently fired at street crossings, wherever the column was halted during the march, and they brought forth a cheer and the old cry of "Live down." The men were very proud of these pets and polished them and cared for them in the tenderest manner.

Squad No. 6, of Pennsylvania, Maryland, Kentucky and California, about seventy-five all together.

There were in round numbers 125 members of the old First West Virginia Cavalry Third Brigade, under command of Captain John W. Shryver, a number of that town's leading citizens in the line; Holliday Post, No. 12, of Wheeling, W. J. Robinson, followed Meade, with twenty-eight men in line, headed by McGivney's drum corps. The Columbus drum corps was at the head of 8th St. Sidiger Post, No. 35, of that place. Daniel Finkler commanded the seventy-five men in this post mustered they carried a beautiful silk banner. E. W. Stephens Post, No. 35, recently organized in South Wheeling, came out with its own drum corps, twenty-eight strong, commanded by Joseph Arkie. Hon. Josiah Sinclair was at the head of twenty-five men from Hancock Post, No. 48, of Newwood.

Colonel Henry B. Hubbard commanded the old First West Virginia Infantry; there were about eighty survivors of the famous old regiment in line, and they marched in fine form. Captain S. Kraus commanded the forty-two men of the Seventh West Virginia Infantry. They reported for duty; they carried their old battle flags, and were manifestly proud of them. The Black Eagle drum corps furnished the music for Battery "D" (Carlin's) First West Virginia Infantry Artillery; there were fifty-three of the corps in line, and they were all veterans of the war.

There were detachments from the Posts at Mt. Pleasant, Barnsville and other points. Spangler Post, of Blair, Pa., was in line, and the members of the Post, No. 202, of St. Clairsville, was mounted. There were sixty men under command of Colonel J. F. Charlesworth, and all were mounted on white or gray horses. Spangler Post was one of the features of the parade.

Bringing up the rear were open carriages containing Gen. Davall, Capt. John Carlin, W. Va. Dept. Commander G. B. R. Capt. B. B. Dwyer, Treasurer G. A. R. Major, Wm. Grubb and Dr. T. H. H. W. E. Hughes and Howard Haislet, the executive officers of the Chamber of Commerce; Captain Hart, of Washington, Pa., hospital steward of the 1st W. Va. Inf.; Gen. R. E. Fleming, of Fairbairn, Minn.; Major R. H. Haislet, of Washington, D. C.; Major Lee Haymond, of Clarkburg; Surgeon Neale of the 1st Ohio; Sergeant McCanley; D. W. Arent and John Schuler, of Pittsburgh; Col. N. Wilkinson; the ladies' relief corps attached to Spangler Post, No. 138, of Wheeling, and a number of others. McPherson camp No. 1 Sons of Veterans, another East Liverpool organization, was also in line.

Along the route of the procession the decorations were of great profusion and the enthusiasm was intense. Over 1,000 men were in line. By 12:30 o'clock all were on the parade, the infantry crossing on the pontoon bridge and the cavalry and carriages over the Suspension bridge.

THE SOLDIERS' DINNER.

At Least Five Thousand People Fed and Twice as Many

In getting into the Fair Grounds the rush was so great that a blockade at the gates was with difficulty averted several times. The old vets had grown hungry on their march and they broke for the dinner tables at once. The Bellevue relief corps ladies hastened to the assistance of the fifty or sixty Wheeling ladies who, under the direction of Commodore Waterman and Busby, fed at least 5,000 people in three hours.

The dinner was the greatest success of all the reunion successes, and too much praise and credit cannot be given to the able committee which arranged for and

GRAND ENCAMPMENT

Of Knights Templar—The Parade—The

St. Louis, Sept. 23.—Notwithstanding the fact that the morning broke clear and warm and that the grand parade postponed from Tuesday was to occur at 11 o'clock. The crowds on the streets early this morning were much smaller than on any previous morning this week. The social festivities and illumination of last evening were most directly responsible for this condition of affairs as they rendered a late sleep this morning most desirable. By 9 o'clock, however, citizens and visitors began to emerge from their resting places and the available points of observation along the line of march and in the vicinity of places of rendezvous of the various divisions were soon occupied by a mass of jovial and patient though perplexed spectators.

At the Knights Templar Grand Encampment meeting yesterday, the proceedings of which were not made known until late last night, the report of the Committee on Grand Encampment was referred to the Committee for consideration. The report of the Charleston, S. C. Commandery No. 1 was read, and the attention of the Committee on Finance was called to the deplorable condition of their brethren in that city.

The report of the Committee on Jurisprudence regarding certain amendments was read and spread upon the minutes. The amendment to strike out of the vow of officers the words "and code of statutes," was voted down by a large majority. The qualifications for membership in the order of Knighthood was laid upon the table.

The amendment to change the clause of the constitution empowering the Grand Encampment to designate the time and place of holding the next encampment by substituting the encampment shall be held in the city of Washington, D. C., in the month of December, at such time as said month as the Grand Master may direct, was voted down by a large majority. It was also the proposition to abolish parades and make the Grand Encampment a purely business proceeding.

Notwithstanding the lateness of the day and the effect of the announcement made yesterday, the Grand Encampment was abandoned, but few changes of the original programme were made necessary by the postponement.

All members of the commander-in-chief's staff were on hand and substitutes for absent officers were only required in two or three instances.

The rank and file comprised less than half the number of the Grand Encampment, but nearly every commandery announced to participate was represented. The Grand Encampment met long after the time announced for their assembly this morning and transacted but little business at the morning session.
